On Friday, FEMA will issue the new flood maps for Hancock County. The maps will be accessible at www.FEMA.gov.

After months of research and analysis, the new maps place the flood line 6-8 feet above the previously used 100 year flood stillwater levels. Stillwater elevations are essentially the storm surge. Base

Despite objections and a 3-2 "against" vote from the Bay St. Louis City Council, work began yesterday on a Stennis Space Center-planned travel-trailer park behind Urgent Care on Hwy. 90.

BY DWAYNE BREMER
Staff Writer

A proposed trailer park behind Gulf South Urgent Care was the source of a heated debate at the Bay St. Louis City Council meeting Tuesday night. After a long discussion between council members, the mayor, and citizens, the council voted 3-2, to oppose the 167 unit trailer park that is being raised on private property.

A previous vote by the city council, however, has allowed for FEMA trailers to be placed on private property. FEMA has already approved the project and construction is underway.

"I am really worried about it," council member Jim Thriffley said. "I guess FEMA thinks they can just come in and take over our town. They have violated all of our zoning ordinances, and it's like they are telling us your rules don't matter anymore, we will do what we want."

Defending the project were council members Doug Seal, Bobby Compretta, and Mayor Eddie Favre.

Governor asks local officials to stand up to voter pressure

THE SEA COAST ECHO

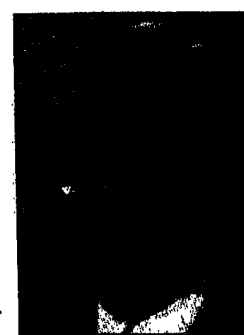

As part of hurricane recovery and rebuilding efforts, Gov. Haley Barbour recently hosted a conference call with supervisors from George, Hancock, Harrison, Jackson, Pearl River, and Stone Counties. Discussed in the call were long-term recovery plans for each county, as well as the Governor's role in assisting supervisors in post-Katrina efforts, particularly on land use planning.

Barbour urged each of the counties to establish strong building codes, like the International Building Code standards and smart-code for planning purposes, and suggested that supervisors stall any non-essential permitting until these land use practices are in place.

"Right now, many coastal counties are under a lot of pressure to issue permits to rebuild in devastated areas and to open up land for new developments," Barbour said. "But it's important for us to remember that public safety and welfare is our first priority. I believe we should not put people and property at risk by building back too quickly or using out-of-date rules, building standards, and sub-standard material."

During the conference call.

Traffic has increased dramatically in Kiln since Hurricane Katrina hit on Aug. 29. However, Kiln-area merchants are enjoying an equally dramatic increase in business.

Kiln residents are 'fuming' about post-hurricane traffic

BY DWAYNE BREMER
Staff Writer

Residents of Kiln have seen their small community turn into a central axis point for relief efforts in the past two months. Nearly all of the businesses in the Kiln have been reopened, and with the influx of thousands of relief workers into the area, traffic has become an unwanted but necessary problem.

The main area of congestion has become the traffic light at Hwy 603 and Kiln-Deslie Rd. The light stays green for the north and south bound lanes for only 30 seconds, causing backups during morning and evening hours.

"At first people were more patient, but now there is a little more frustration," said Dolly Lee, owner of Dolly's Quick Stop.

Last week citizens expressed their frustration at the Governor's Commission on Rebuilding the Coast.

"It takes 45 minutes to get from the interstate to Hwy. 43 in the evenings," one lady said.

Officials say that they are aware of the problem, and that communications are ongoing to fix the problem. A week later, there has been no change in the situation.

Hancock County Sheriff Steve Garber believes that there is a simple solution to the problem.

"I think that the red light should stay green for at least 90 seconds for the north and south bound lanes. Now is the time we should think about making Hwy. 603 four lanes all the way to Hwy. 43," Garber said.

The idea of keeping the light green longer has support from other citizens, but there are other factors to consider as well. The Hancock County Arena is located on Kiln-Deslie Rd, and FEMA has been using the site storage of trailers.

There is a landfill on the west side of Kiln-Deslie Rd, as well as East Hancock School on the right side.

One positive effect of the increased traffic is that business is doing well in Kiln.

"We have had an increase in business, this morning I could not even get into the parking lot. It is only now starting to level off," Lee said.

The Mississippi Department of Transportation (MDOT) is in charge of the traffic lights. Several calls to MDOT were not returned.

SEA COAST ECHO

St. Rose de Lima Gospel Choir will celebrate the Season of Giving with its second annual community concert on Tuesday, November 22 at 6:30 pm at St. Rose de Lima Church, 301 South Necaise, Bay St. Louis. There will be no charge for admission.

This is an opportunity to hear Gospel singing at its best. Under the direction of Al Acker, the 30+ member choir has performed from New Orleans to Atlanta.

Concerts and performances include New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival; the House of Blues; The Biloxi Blues Fest; Toast to the Coast and everything from county fairs and expos to weddings, funerals revivals and conventions.

This past spring with Pete Fountain they sang to a full house at the Casino Magic Entertainment Complex, benefiting the building fund for the St. Rose Community Life Center.

Congress urged to save Flood Insurance Program

*Commissioner of Insurance George Dale announced Monday he has contacted the Mississippi Congressional delegation strongly urging them to take immediate action in passing The National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).

Further Enhanced Borrowing Authority Act of 2005. On Friday, November 11, Write Your Own Companies under the NFIP were informed that at that time FEMA was unable to increase companies' Letters of Credit until Congress increases the NFIP's borrowing authority.

As a result, the companies were advised to discontinue issuing claim payments to the extent they would need additional Letters of Credit amounts. Some insurance companies are informing Hurricane Katrina victims who had purchased flood insurance through the government's NFIP that they are not able to pay flood claims until NFIP gets more money. The Act would increase the NFIP's borrowing authority and allow Write Your Own Companies to continue to pay claims.

In his letter faxed to the delegation Dale said, "Unless the National Flood Insurance Program Further Enhanced Borrowing Authority Act of 2005 is immediately passed, those Mississippi citizens who had purchased flood insurance and have been paying premiums for years will suffer yet another catastrophic blow."

"While we all search for ways to assist those who did not have flood insurance we cannot and must not abandon those who have been paying flood insurance premiums with the good faith knowledge that the federal government would pay claims if disaster struck. Disaster has struck and is in danger of striking again if the federal government fails to stan behind its obligations to pay these claims because the NFIP has run out of borrowing authority."

Dale stressed that MID does not anticipate this having any impact on wind claims that are paid directly by the insurance companies.

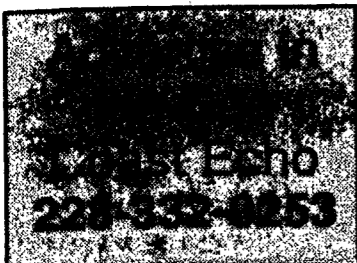

The National Flood Insurance Program Further Enhanced Borrowing Authority Act of 2005 asks that the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 4016(a)), as amended by the National Flood Insurance Program Further Enhanced Borrowing Authority Act of 2005 (Public Law 109-65; 119 Stat. 1998), be amended by striking '$3,500,000,000' and inserting '$8,500,000,000'.

Cuevas' Quotes

by Ellis C. Cuevas
Publisher Emeritus

It's me, it's me, it's Ellis C.

Yes, it is me who continues to write my columns.

I know Randy, Geoff, Cecilia, and Judy #2, now moved to Judy #1 since Katrina, have all been asked how I am doing.

Well, for one thing I have been using muscles retired long ago. Jane and I work very long trying to get our home somewhat together.

Over a 42 year period a couple can accumulate so much "stuff."

Once again I will say we were very lucky in still having walls and a FEMA blue roof, as so many of our community lost every possession in addition to their home.

Things will never be the same, but at the same time, so many still have that positive attitude, things will be better than ever.

Our youngsters appear to be happy to be back in school.

Just thing, us old folks would talk about Hurricane Camille, while our youngsters will talk about Katrina being, rightfully so, the "storm of storms."

Gradually we see improvements in our community. Businesses are beginning to reopen on a weekly basis.

If someone needs a job, there seems to be more work available than folks to fill the positions.

Help wanted signs are posted everywhere.

Thanks, thanks for the many volunteers from across the nation. So many religions and folks caught up in wanting to help their fellow man recover from the worst natural disaster this nation has ever seen.

We have not been forgotten for sure.

We are now in a starting over mode and this is a great opportunity for our political leaders to make changes that should have been made decades ago.

Is our county jail, courthouse, justice courts, chancery and circuit court located where they will best benefit our current and future generations?

What about the much talked about building codes for the county. The "tail of the dog" is being wagged by a few who use double talk to confuse the public. Think about a lot of things!

Until next time!

Examining race & the press

Old readers of The Clarion-Ledger and its former afternoon counterpart, the Jackson Daily News, hardly have to be reminded how shameful was their coverage when some of the state's most heinous civil rights crimes were committed in the 1950s and 1960s.

How Mississippi print journalism generally, and the Jackson newspapers in particular, responded in news coverage and editorially to civil rights crises in the state during that era was evaluated by a group of Mississippi journalism professors in a five-year project.

In a volume of nine essays entitled, "The Press and Race," pub-

Eyes on Mississippi

by Bill Minor

lished in 2001 by the University Press of Mississippi, the study gave virtually all daily newspapers in the state a failing grade when measured against their responsibility to the public.

But the CL-JDN, being the state's biggest papers and located in the capital city, the study makes clear, carried an even heavier burden than their brethren in the smaller towns to be a socially responsible medium. Instead, the capital papers helped to preserve Mississippi's image as a "closed society," even while the state was undergoing a historic human rights transition, marked by violent resistance from segregationist forces.

Even worse, the Jackson papers, as the study revealed, served as conduits to spread in print anti-civil rights propaganda generated by the notoriously secret state sovereignty commission, created to perpetuate white supremacy.

Its use of key words, such as the C-L's description of the mostly Northern white college student volunteers who came to the state during the 1964 Freedom Summer as "race-mixing invaders" and "dirty beatniks" no doubt helped create the climate for violence.

When heinous racial murders occurred and the white perpetrators went unpunished by state courts, the newspaper expressed no outrage that Mississippi maintained a dual system of justice, one for black citizens and

WHO DAT GONNA MOVE DEM SAINTS?

We should honor our veterans

As we remember Veterans Day, let me tell you about one of the veterans I know. He stormed a German machine gun nest, earning a Bronze Star when I was still a toddler. When I turned ten, he was commanding troops in Korea. When I was in high school, he was elected to the Mississippi Senate. When I was in my mid-twenties and just starting my family, he was elected to Congress. And when I was elected to Congress a short time later, this veteran became a role model and friend whom I still cherish.

I learned a lot from Sonny Montgomery, as did people throughout our nation. Thanks to Sonny's service, we're all the better. In fact, President Bush honored

From the Senate

by Trent Lott
U.S. Senator

Sonny at the White House on November 9 with the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civil award which honors distinguished service to the country.

It's fitting that we honor "Mr. Veteran" so near to Veterans Day. Sonny is a man who used his Congressional seat to make life better for his fellow vets and who enabled two million young Americans to get a college education through the historic Montgomery GI Bill.

I was honored to be at the White House to witness President Bush present Sonny with his medal. Standing alongside him were other Medal of Freedom recipients including Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Richard Myers, and even legendary men and women from the sports and entertainment fields like Andy Griffith, Paul Harvey, Carol Burnett, Jack Nicklaus and Aretha Franklin. It spoke volumes about the caliber of Sonny's accomplishments, and it caused me to again reflect on Sonny's service to others and to America - a hallmark of his generation for us to emulate today.

Born in Meridian in 1920, Sonny was destined to personify America's "Greatest Generation," World War II veterans who, as President Kennedy said in his inaugural address, were "tempered by war" at a very young age, then sent again to fight in Korea. This tempered, well-honed generation served and shaped modern America like no other before it, with a discipline, energy and examanother for whites.

In the 1960s, civil rights pioneer Medgar Evers, the first consummate Mississippi black leader to emerge, had been assassinated in the driveway of his West Jackson home, three young Freedom Summer activists were murdered in Neshoba County, and respected Hattiesburg grocer, voting rights advocate Vernon Dahmer had died in a Klan fire-bombing of his home, and the newspaper raised no serious objection when justice went unserved.

Against this sorry journalistic history, a red-headed investigative reporter named Jerry Mitchell, then in his 30s, and previously with experience on small papers in Arkansas joined the C-L staff in the latter 1980s.

In 1989 after viewing (with me, and two legendary ex-FBI stalwarts) a premiere of the movie "Mississippi Burning,"

Mitchell was inspired to launch what eventually became a one-man crusade to reopen major unresolved civil rights murder cases that his newspaper had shown no interest for decades in reviving.

With surgeon-like precision, Mitchell methodically and quietly peeled back years of neglect of the civil rights murders. He uncovered forgotten testimony, misplaced key pieces of evidence, unknown witnesses and lost transcripts from failed attempts decades earlier to convict major suspects in the murders, some known to still be alive.

In sustained news stories, Mitchell pressed, and sometimes cajoled, state prosecutors into pursuing evidence that would warrant bringing to the bar of justice those who had been the primary actors in the crimes, yet long enjoyed their freedom.

Mitchell demonstrated a rare ability, in his boyish, unthreatening manner, to get witnesses, and even suspected killers, to unburden themselves to him, all the while building a massive case file that would help prosecutors later make arrests and bring convictions.

Even the previously reticent C-L allowed Mitchell the time and leeway to wage his campaign to crack open closed chapters of the state's--and the newspaper's--dark civil rights past and lay them open to public view.

As the result of the investigative reporting that Mitchell had launched in 1989, over a span of next 15 years, state courts would convict Byron De La Beckwith (1994) and give him a life sentence for the Evers assassination; former Klan Imperial Wizard Sam Bowers (1996) for plotting the Dahmer firebomb murder, and earlier this year one-time

Klansman and preacher Edgar Ray Killen, now 80, for orchestrating the three civil rights workers slayings in Neshoba County.

Mitchell's reporting that brought long-delayed justice in the three notorious civil rights murders, in this writer's estimation, served both as a classic model of journalistic redemption for a newspaper that once turned a blind eye to racial injustice, but also redemption for Mississippi's tarnished racial history.

Now at age 46, Jerry Mitchell is getting the national recognition he deserves.

ple that really brought our nation into its own, making us the world's most powerful military and economic power and, more importantly, its most visible beacon of freedom.

Like most members of this generation, Sonny excelled out of uniform, too. After World War II and before and after Korea, he did well in the insurance business. Then in 1956 he decided to once again serve his state and nation. He was elected that year to the Mississippi Legislature and served ten years with a perfect attendance record. Mind you, that was all back in the days before interstates when it was a much longer drive between Jackson and Meridian.

In 1966 Sonny won a seat in Congress where he would serve for the next 30 years, shuffling between Washington, D.C. and East Mississippi. One day he'd be at the White House talking to Presidents, the next visiting Mississippians in Quitman or Newton. When I ran my first statewide campaign for U.S. Senate in 1988, I'd see Sonny at local festivals, hailing most folks by their first names like an old friend. In fact, he was. There's hardly a committee meeting, House vote, or Chamber of Commerce banquet back in Mississippi that he missed. He served 28 years on the House Veterans Affairs Committee, 14 of those years as chairman. To add to that, Sonny served 24 years on the Armed Services Committee. All the while, he never lost a vote on the House floor.

We shouldn't forget that Sonny was elected at the height of the Vietnam War on a commitment to "bring the boys back with dignity." Despite the vicious politics surrounding Vietnam, Sonny kept that commitment to our military. Throughout his long career, he always strived to give our men and women in uniform dignity, securing better equipment, better benefits and a higher standard of living while they were in uniform and after their service, too. He even made multiple trips to Vietnam to search for POWs and return the remains of servicemen to their families.

This Veterans Day it's entirely appropriate for President Bush and all of us again to recognize Sonny's service. But let's also remember that veterans of Sonny's generation and those of new generations are among us every day. Veterans don't have to be confidantes of Presidents or even combat soldiers or Representatives like Sonny. They may be young and fresh back from the War on Terror or even at a stateside post. Indeed, the service of every man and woman in uniform takes sacrifice and must be respected, honored and always remembered with recurring praise. Our veterans, regardless of when, where, why or how long they served, deserve a hearty "thank you" from us. Who knows? Among them could very well be a young man or woman destined to serve our nation anew with the same high standards as Sonny's service.

'Taking care of the heroes'

All emergency personnel are invited to a free two hour workshop entitled "After the Hurricanes: Taking Care of the Heroes." The workshop will be held on November 18 from 7-9 p.m. at the Crystal Inn on Canal Rd. in Gulfport. Law enforcement, firefighters, EMTs, first responders, health care professionals, military, and many others who have served our communities through this difficult time are the focus of the workshop. All are welcome.

Dr. Holly Tanigoshi, an expert on stress, trauma and law enforcement will discuss the physical and psychological responses to trauma and stress as well as specific methods of dealing with that trauma and stress in healthy ways.

This workshop will assist not only those quiet heroes who have served in so many ways since Hurricane Katrina, but it will also assist their families and the communities in which they live.

Dr. Tanigoshi, a native of Washington state and a graduate of the University of New Orleans, is currently an Assistant Professor at Canisius College in Buffalo, NY. She feels a strong connection to the New Orleans area and is volunteering her time to share her expertise.

She has worked with law enforcement regarding stress and trauma. Dr. Tanigoshi has given workshops in several areas around the country.

The workshops are sponsored by members of the Theosophical Society in America, a non-profit organization. The Theosophical Society in America has its national headquarters in Wheaton, Illinois, and members of the organization have donated money to make this workshop possible.

Trailers -- Stennis camp

"If we allow one trailer on a lot or 100, it's no distinction. Nobody wants to see it, but we have to make decisions like this until we recover. It's only temporary," Favre said.

"We can't keep ducking and hiding from the problems. People need places to live," Seal said.

Council member Billy Taylor questioned why the trailer park had to be located inside the city limits.

"I want to see a list of people who will be living there. I think that Bay St. Louis residents should be first on the list. There is enough space out by Stennis to put 50,000 trailers, but we were told that it would be too much red tape for that to happen," Taylor said.

Members of the community at the meeting voiced their opinion also.

"I think it is pretty sleazy. Is there going to be any parking, is it going to be fenced, is there going to be any place for kids to play?" said Kevin Fitzpatrick.

Bay St. Louis resident Rachel Ramsey defended the trailer park citing that Bay St. Louis residents should be "good neighbors."

"We need to take the high road here. These people need to be put somewhere. If Bay St. Louis residents need a place to stay then they should be first on the list, but we should not limit it to just our residents. People in Waveland need housing too. If the shoe was on the other foot, we would want Waveland to take us in," Ramsey said.

"I'm all for families hosting families, and people helping each other out. We have always helped our citizens, but when someone uses times like this for financial gain, it violates everything that we stand for as Americans," Thriffley said.

Earlier in the meeting, Favre asked the council to approve a loan from the Mississippi Development Bank not to exceed 10 million dollars. Favre stated that the city will not have to pay any fees on the loan, and the city will get an excellent interest rate. Funds will be able to be drawn out when the city funds its projects. The loan is to help in the rebuilding of Beach Blvd., as well as to fund the Hwy. 90 lighting project. The two projects are going to cost an estimated seven million dollars.

"The money will be partially reimbursed by the Federal Highway Administration at a rate of 80%. We may also get some money from FEMA, but we have to pay for the projects first before we can get reimbursed," Favre said.

Council member Doug Seal requested that the council be notified when the reimbursements come in.

"This sounds like a credit card. The council needs to be aware of the status of the reimbursements," Seal said.

"When we get the reimbursements we can look at where we stand, and take the appropriate action," Favre said.

The request for the loan passed 5-0.

During the mayors report, council member Jeffrey Reed asked if the city was still operating on emergency funds. Favre responded by reporting that the city had only received a total of $252,000 from FEMA.

"We are in line for more money, and we have several application pending, but basically we are operating on the money we had in the bank, and the gaming revenue we have received since the storm," Favre said.

The Army Corps of Engineers reported that has been 6,449 right of entries signed, and that the process is now underway. One question that has been on the minds of citizens is whether or no citizens will be billed for the clean-up process.

"I heard today that citizens may be getting billed for the right of entries, but I'm not 100% sure. I would hope that FEMA would reimburse people for this," Favre said.

Next week's meeting on November 21, will be a town meeting with Congressman Gene Taylor to be held the Bay St. Louis train Depot at 6:00 to 8:00.

Governor Barbour offered the counties assistance for long-term recovery, including:

- Funding from MDA for comprehensive land use and recovery planning;
- A technical assistance team, organized by The Governor's

Commission on Recovery, Rebuilding and Renewal, state agencies and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), that will work with local county teams to develop a master plan for each county;

- Coordination from the Commission and Governor's Office to identify financial resources to implement each county plan;

- Long-term help from the state during the implementation of each county's recovery plan that works side-by-side with the Board of Supervisors.

Also, the Governor re-emphasized that he is prepared to immediately provide these six counties with expert planners at no cost to assist them during this interim period.

Flood maps

Flood Elevations (BFEs) or stillwater elevations are now 20 feet on open coast land and 18 feet on the back bay. These new elevations will be used in the proposed Katrina Recovery Maps. The recovery maps take the Base Flood Elevation (BFE) and add the predicted wave height for a given elevation. These maps will be used by insurance companies to determine new rates on a house to house basis.

These new maps don't have to be accepted by the county. They are intended to prevent future flood damage. Accepting the maps will make residents eligible for reduced flood insurance rates.

Residents with flood insurance can continue to pay their insurance premium for 18 months. After that, the new rates go into effect based on the Katrina Recovery Maps.

The new maps are designed for a strong Category 3 hurricane, not a storm like Katrina. According to Todd Davidson, the surge caused by "Katrina was greater than any storm FEMA has analyzed in the country. The surge was well in excess of the 100 year stillwater levels."

Hancock County is vulnerable to high storm surges due to the coastal layout. If accepted, the new flood elevations will require houses to be built higher. Higher structures will have to be built stronger to withstand wind damage, leaving some question as to whether its cheaper to buy insurance or rebuild every time a destructive storm hits.

FEMA's Hazard Mitigation Grant Program will provide funding for those who are eligible and have to rebuild or raise their houses. Even if local officials do not accept the Katrina Recovery Maps residents may still apply for funding.

Dairy farmers donate to Bay-Waveland schools

SEA COAST ECHO

Life is far from normal for students at Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District in Mississippi, but it's one step closer thanks to Southeastern Dairy Farmers.

Farmers donated six milk coolers valued at $29,000 to the district in November. The donation was organized through the Southeast United Dairy Industry Association (SUDIA), dairy farmers' regional promotional organization in the Southeast.

"Dairy farmers felt it was important to help these students find a sense of normalcy when they returned to school," said Janet Grubbs, SUDIA's Director of Nutrition and Communication. "One of the best things we could do to help the district get back to normal was to make sure it could serve delicious, cold milk with school meals."

The Gulf Coast school district was hit hard by Hurricane Katrina. The district canceled classes for more than two months until it was able to get portable classrooms to reopen in early November. Today, only about 60 percent of the students have returned to school.

Very few of the district's buildings are useable. Most of the classrooms, as well as the cafeterias, can be found in temporary buildings. The cafeterias were capable of serving food, but they lacked facilities to refrigerate milk.

"These beautiful milk boxes with cow spots will be so uplifting for the kids," said Judy Mumphrey, food service director for Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District. "They are going to be so excited. It will be such a bright spot in their day."

SUDIA is investigating the possibility of buying coolers for other districts that were hit by Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita.

"Dairy farmers have a strong desire to help schools and help those who have had their lives turned upside down by this natural disaster," Grubbs said. "We're looking for every opportunity to pitch in to help."

Southeastern dairy farmers have also donated more than 300,000 units of milk to evacuation shelters throughout the Southeast since Hurricane Katrina landed in late August.

The Visualization Laboratory at the Center for Higher Learning at the Southern Miss John C. Stennis Space Center is just one of many advanced technological resources the University of Southern Mississippi can offer in assisting in the recovery from Hurricane Katrina.

Southern Miss' Stennis Center helping Coast recover from Katrina

From its Visualization Lab at the Southern Miss John C. Stennis Space Center to its Department of Geography and Geology's Geospatial Information Systems Application, the University of Southern Mississippi has the resources needed to revolutionize disaster awareness, preparedness and introduce smart growth strategies, said Joe Swaykos, M.A., director of the Center for Higher Learning (CHL) at the Southern Miss Stennis Space Center.

These projects are underway:

- Examining the ways in which new construction could survive another Katrina or a storm of even greater magnitude is a significant element, with respect to the recovery process, in the ongoing research into Katrina and its aftermath

- Using Lidar, an airborne laser device which measures elevation of the land along the coast, scientists can obtain a very detailed topographical relief map of the Gulf Coast.

"This information will allow decision makers (in the redevelopment process) to see what effects extreme weather would have on the land as it is now, which is certainly different than it was 10 weeks ago," Swaykos said. "We want to help architects and others involved in the redevelopment process make smarter decisions and optimize the funding they have for redevelopment, and we have the technology and resources to do that," he said.

- A collaborative effort between the Center for Higher Learning Visualization Laboratory and other Southern Miss scientists will include a storm surge model where different storm scenarios are examined, as well as what impact another flood or floods would have on the "new" post-Katrina coastline.

"We will take the data collections from the Department of Geography and overlay it on satellite images of the coast to recreate a sequence of events relating to the flooding from Katrina," said Swaykos. The data provided would examine different levels of storm surge and its effects on the Gulf Coast.

"Our data on storm surge and flooding will be extremely valuable in building a post-Katrina database here at Southern Miss that can be used by everyone working on Katrina recovery and redevelopment," said Dr. Clifton Dixon, chair of the Southern Miss Department of Geography and Geology. "Already, insurance underwriters are accessing the data, as well as contractors removing debris, and economic planning commissions. Ideally the data should be a part of the information foundation used within the governor's commission."

Immediately following Hurricane Katrina, faculty from the Department of Geography and Geology began working on the Mississippi Gulf Coast and spent the next two months focused upon collecting perishable data. New data from the research being conducted on the coast will be gathered, archived, shared, visualized and used for simulation of natural and man-made disasters and recovery. This is accomplished using local knowledge and expertise resident among collaborating agencies — National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Homeland Security, Army Corps of Engineers and other universities.

Tish Williams, Hancock County chamber of commerce director, is one of many coast leaders looking to Southern Miss for assistance in the area's redevelopment. "Southern Miss and the CHL at the Southern Miss Stennis Space Center have excellent faculty experts and resources that state and local officials should utilize in their recovery and rebuilding efforts along the Mississippi Gulf Coast."

"We want to bring the strengths of Southern Miss to bear on the reduction of economic risk resulting from the natural and man-made disasters in coastal areas," Swaykos said.

About The University of Southern Mississippi

The University of Southern Mississippi, founded in 1910, is a comprehensive doctoral and research-extensive university fulfilling its mission of being a leading university in engaging and empowering individuals to transform lives and communities. In a tradition of leadership for student development, Southern Miss is educating a 21st century work force providing intellectual capital, cultural enrichment and innovation to Mississippi and the world. Southern Miss is located in Hattiesburg, Miss., with an additional campus and teaching and research sites on the Mississippi Gulf Coast; further information is found at www.usm.edu.

Senate Finance Committee reports out $5.5 billion in Katrina tax cuts

SEA COAST ECHO

The Senate Finance Committee has readied for full Senate action a tax cuts bill which includes $5.5 billion in tax cuts and incentives for Katrina-impacted counties, including those in Mississippi, according to Senator Trent Lott of Mississippi, a senior member of the Committee.

"This is a strong package to help our businesses rebuild and ensure that displaced Mississippians, seeking the jobs that will come with this rebuilding, will get critical housing assistance, enabling them to stay on the coast," Lott said, adding that the bill is expected to be voted on by the full Senate before Thanksgiving.

The bill contains more than a dozen Katrina-related tax incentives for the Gulf Opportunity (GO) Zone, defined as that portion of the Katrina disaster area determined by President Bush to warrant individual assistance from the federal government under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act. Lott developed the package with Finance Chairman Charles Grassley of Iowa and Ranking Democrat Max Baucus of Montana, he said it affects about 40 counties in Mississippi.

The legislation will allow businesses temporary relief from some taxation and regulations to re-establish their places of employment. "By significantly lowering the cost of capital for small, medium, and large businesses alike, these provisions will spur business investment on the coast," Lott said. "For instance, businesses would be permitted to expense 50 percent of the cost of new equipment, in addition to some commercial and residential rental real estate expenditures."

Lott said one provision in particular focuses on helping small businesses in the disaster zone. Small businesses could deduct up to $200,000 of the cost of property, including their enterprises, and increase their level of investment, allowing more small businesses to use this benefit in rebuilding.

The Katrina tax cut package increases by $2,500 per capita the amount of tax exempt bonds Mississippi can allocate in the GO Zone through 2011 and allows an additional advanced refunding for all bonds issued prior to 2007 within the GO Zone by the State of Mississippi and by all local bond issuers. "This provision effectively allows cash-strapped localities to restructure their debt, delaying payments on principal and interest while their tax base is reestablished," Lott said.

Lott said the bill provides $1 billion in New Markets Tax Credits for companies investing in Mississippi businesses and construction. To infuse businesses that have lost revenue with cash, it allows out a net operating loss carryback for businesses, public utilities and small timber growers in the GO Zone for new investment and repair, business casualty losses, and moving and temporary housing expenses. Under the proposal, 50 percent of demolition and cleanup costs would be deductible by business. The bill would double reforestation expensing to $20,000.

Lott said the bill provides a 40 percent employee retention credit for wages paid up to $6,000, after August 28, 2005, and before December 31, 2005. That provision incentivizes businesses, that have had to close temporarily, to continue to employ Mississippians until they reopen. The credit, which already applies to small employers, would cover all employers, he added.

Finally, the legislation includes significant incentives to ensure an adequate housing supply. Under one provision, funding for low income housing would be increased by allowing Mississippi to allocate volumes of additional housing credit amounts, three times the normal allocation, with respect to population for the years 2006 to 2009. The legislation also provides Mississippians greater access to mortgage revenue bonds, which are tax-exempt bonds that state and local governments generally issue through housing finance agencies. The proceeds from the bonds are used to fund below-market interest rate mortgages for certain first-time homebuyers meeting income and purchase price restrictions. The proposal lifts the first-time homeowner requirement and allows up to $150,000 in mortgage revenue bond proceeds to be used for repairs through December 31, 2010. The proposal also would relax the income and purchase price restrictions with respect to mortgage revenue bonds funded with the proposal's Katrina GO Zone bonds.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist of Tennessee has indicated that the full Senate will vote on the Katrina tax cuts package before the Thanksgiving holiday.

Some churches in diocese will rebuild; some to consolidate

After multiple listening sessions with Catholic parishioners, the advice of his College of Consultors, and "prayerful consideration," Most Reverend Thomas J. Rodi, Bishop of Biloxi, has granted permission to two coast parishes to rebuild most of their parish buildings.

St. Thomas the Apostle Parish in Long Beach may rebuild its parish church on the beach. This permission also extends to the rebuilding of a rectory, offices and parish hall.

St. Clare Parish in Waveland was also granted permission to rebuild its church at the current location on the beach, plus its rectory and offices.

Neither parish has been given permission to rebuild its school as the "process of consultation concerning the future of our Catholic elementary schools is currently taking place," Bishop Rodi wrote to the pastors of the two parishes, in a letter dated November 8.

Bishop Rodi said he realized the strong desire of parishioners to rebuild at the current sites. Both parishes are located on beachfront properties.

Bishop Rodi also announced the merger of two east Biloxi parishes - St. John and St. Louis - into a single united parish at the St. John Parish location at the corner of Bradford and Lameuse Streets.

Father Martin Gillespie, is pastor of St. Clare Parish.

The Women of Christ Church host their 57th annual Harvest Dinner

Despite the fact that their church is gone, the only remaining structure is the bell tower, the Women of Christ Episcopal Church will host their 57th annual Harvest Dinner on the church grounds at noon on Sunday, Nov. 20. Every one is invited to attend. The meal is free.

A Thanksgiving meal of turkey, dressing, beans, corn, and drinks will be prepared through the generosity of Larry Gaston, as well as paris-honors. The Harvest Dinner tradition began many years ago in the kitchen of Mrs. Chrls A. Beth with the assistance of other members of the church raising money for community outreach. This year the Women of the Church wish to carry on the tradition.

Hurricanes and destruction will not deter them from continuing to serve our community. Take outs will be availalbe as well as sit-in meals.

Happy Thanksgiving

The Calvary Chapel Relief Foundation, in association with the Rotary Clubs of Jonesboro, Ark. and WBIR Television of Knoxville, Tn., is working to provide a very Happy Thanksgiving for Hancock County. The groups are working now to collect enough food to feed at least 4,000 people on Thanksgiving Day. Calvary, which provides three meals a day in Bay St. Louis next to the St. Stanislaus football field, will prepare the food and serve it at the Bay St. Louis Train Depot. Thanksgiving dinners

A Thanksgiving celebration dinner begins at 3 p.m. at St. Augustine Catholic Seminary Soccer Field on Seminary Dr. in Bay St. Louis. The traditional serving of turkey dinner with all the fix'ins will begin at 5:30 p.m. The feast is sponsored by the "Christian Relief Camp." For more information

Thanks to the hard work and dedication of more than 3,300 BellSouth employees and contractors, service has now been restored to nearly 600,000 BellSouth customers impacted by Hurricane Katrina in Mississippi.

After Katrina, we moved immediately to re-engineer and rebuild our system from the ground up. Simply running new telephone wires wouldn't work. No storm in history has wiped out so much advanced telecommunications equipment, in addition to the poles and telephone lines, creating an unprecedented challenge.

We appreciate the patience and understanding of our 1.2 million customers throughout Mississippi who were either directly impacted by the storm or whose requests for service have had to wait a little longer. We value your business, and promise you that we will not rest until your needs have been met.

PRCC's Hancock County campus was forced to move from its Hwy. 90 location due to Hurricane Katrina. Echo staff photo by Dwayne Bremer

PRCC Hancock Co. campus will be 'here for the long haul'

BY DWAYNE BREMER
Staff Writer

The Hancock Center for Pearl River Community College has reopened, although the school has relocated for the time being. The college is currently holding classes at Hancock High School in trailers, and at the Stennis airport but hopes are to be back in the Hancock Center in Waveland as soon as possible.

"We are committed to Hancock County as well as all of our six counties we serve. We're not going anywhere," Vice President For Instruction John Grant said. We currently have night classes at Hancock High School, and we plan to have portable classrooms brought to the Waveland site."

The Hancock Center is located in the old Wal-Mart parking lot in Waveland, it opened in January of 2005, offering four classrooms with day and night classes to Hancock County residents.

The building suffered extensive water damage from Hurricane Katrina. Plans are to have trailers brought to the Waveland site for classes in the spring semester. Renovations of the Hancock Center are set to begin, but there is no timeline for the completion of the project.

"We lost all of property in the building. We rented the building, so I can't say how long it's going to take for the owners to fix it. We hope to be back in the Center as soon as possible," Grant said.

Prior to the storm the Hancock Center had more than 200 students. Grant estimated that over half have not returned.

"I think it's about 80 students that have returned, we have lost some teachers as well. Hopefully the students will return. Our goal is to continue to serve and continue to grow," Grant said. The school will be holding registration at the Hancock Center site on January 2nd. Taking over the administrative duties at the Center is lead instructor Margaret Smith.

"We want to stress that we never shut down. We suspended for a little while, but we are here to stay. We are still excited about serving Hancock County," Grant said.

Anyone wishing to find out more information about the Hancock Center or spring classes call Pearl River Community College at 601-403-1000.

Tzuchi Foundation to contribute funds to Hancock County residents

Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. - 4 p.m. at the Bay Saint Louis Middle School members that represent the Tzuchi Foundation of Taiwan will distribute funds to the residents of Bay Saint Louis, Waveland and Hancock County who have turned in their applications to the City of Bay Saint Louis for assistance.

"Unfortunately not everyone was reached for this program. We did the best we could with the information and timing that we had to turn in applications. Residents who furnished their name, address, telephone number and FEMA number at churches, to councilmen and others will be eligible for the funds," said Mike Cuevas, the city's director of Cultural Affairs.

At the Depot, the city will accept applications today only for anyone who has not registered, but lives in Hancock County. Applicants will have to bring proof of residency and their FEMA number to receive this gift on Saturday or Sunday.

"We have made arrangements with the school to accommodate this program. 150 applicants will be taken in first, and everything will be handled on a first come-first serve basis. Your FEMA number is requested to prevent fraud and to protect the integrity of the Foundation," said Cuevas.

Applicants are asked not to call the city offices, but to come to the depot on Thursday to complete the form. Applications will be taken from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. After that time the information must be turned in for distribution to occur.

400 Katrina-affected college students aided by $250,000 from UM relief fund

SEA COAST ECHO

Four hundred University of Mississippi students directly affected by Hurricane Katrina have received $200,000 in donations collected in their behalf.

The UM Student Relief Fund reached a total of $253,210, according to Ron Guest, director of development services. The fund's primary focus is to assist students displaced or otherwise affected by the storm. More than 4,100 Ole Miss students come from Gulf Coast counties designated as disaster areas by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and nearly 100 students have transferred to the Oxford campus from universities and colleges damaged in the storm.

"We received a total of 760 grant applications, and to date 400 students have been awarded grants of $500 each," said Larry Ridgeway, associate vice chancellor for student life. "Remaining funds, and any additional funds collected, will be awarded for the spring semester using the same awarding criteria."

Currently enrolled UM students from the affected areas, as well as displaced transfer students, were eligible to apply for the grants based on financial need. Priority was given to students from the six southern-most counties in Mississippi and parishes in and around New Orleans.

The fund is administered by the University of Mississippi Foundation. A selection committee comprised of representatives from the Ole Miss student body and the offices of Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Dean of Students and Financial Aid review all applications.

Donations to the fund include a $100,000 gift from Ole Miss alumnus Larry Martindale and his wife, Susan. "As the need became apparent, I thought how horrible it would be to be a student in that situation," said Martindale, vice chairman of W.B. Johnson Properties LLC in Atlanta. "Knowing we had the resources, we were compelled to give."

The Martindales' donation is the largest single gift received for the fund, but generosity has been consistent from the start. A $50,000 gift came from NFL tackle Todd Wade, an Ole Miss alumnus playing for the Houston Texans. The Jackson native said the donation was the least he could do.

"The hurricane was just so devastating, anything I could do to help, I wanted to do," Wade said. "When I contacted Chancellor (Robert) Khayat, he said a contribution to the relief fund was the way to go."

In mid-September, $52,633.22 was collected by UM students from fans attending the Ole Miss-Wyoming football game.

The fund was established shortly after the hurricane with a collection drive at the Ole Miss Student Union, which netted more than $12,500.

At that time, donors also contributed two truckloads of bottled water, canned food and paper goods for relief efforts on the Gulf Coast.

Gifts made by check to the fund are tax deductible to the extent of the law. They can be mailed to University of Mississippi Foundation, P.O. Box 249, University, MS 38677. The mail-in should be clearly identified for the UM Student Relief Fund. Donations also can be made online at <http://www.umf.ole-miss.edu/onlinegift>.

Brush & Hughes earn top honors

The Bay High Tigers (4-4) ended their season on Friday night with a 14-7 loss to Mendenhall in the first round of the state playoffs while the Hancock Hawks fell to the Red Rebels of Harrison Central 45-19 in Lyman.

The Tigers had an opportunity with less than a minute remaining; however, the opportunity slipped right through their fingers, literally.

On their final drive of the night, Tyler Brush threw an aerial to Robert Labat who had difficulty bringing the pass down that would have tied the score at 14-14.

Bay High didn't give up much to Mendenhall on the road as they were down just 7-0 at half-time.

Bay High scored in the third period when Brush connected with Labat on a 22-yard pass. Kyle Moran tied the score at 7-7 with his PAT. With about eight minutes left in the game, Mendenhall went ahead for good with their second touchdown of the game.

Defensively, the Tigers were led by Trevor Adam who recorded 13 total tackles and a fumble recovery while Kyle Hughes added 11 total tackles and a sack. On offense, Tyler Brush paced the Tigers with 131 yards on 7-of-14 passing and a touchdown.

The Hancock Hawks ended their winless 2005 campaign in Lyman with a 45-19 loss to Harrison Central.

The Hawks got on the scoreboard with a five-yard toss from Braxton Necaize to Chase McIver in the third quarter. Andrew Smith scored the other two touchdowns for Hancock on runs of 13 and 2 yards.

Smith ended the game with 92 yards on 18 carries while Brently Necaize led the defense with 10 total stops and a fumble recovery. Kevin LaFontaine added seven tackles and two sacks for Hancock.

The Offensive Player of the Week for Week Eight is Bay High's Tyler Brush who threw for 131 yards and a touchdown in the 14-7 playoff loss to Mendenhall.

The Defensive Player of the Week for Week Eight is Bay High senior defensive lineman Kyle Hughes who tallied 11 total stops and a sack for the Tigers against Mendenhall.

There are some who say that football should not have been played amidst all the chaos that surrounds us. Those detractors were not present in the stadiums on Friday nights either.

For many, the Friday nights under the lights gave them hope after hard weeks in the sun hauling debris, gutting houses and parting with everything we had known. It was those nights in brightly lit stadiums that made the abnormal feel normal. Special thanks go out to all the players, coaches, administration officials and parents who helped make the 2005 season a reality.

The underclassmen returning and the coaches are already preparing for the 2006 gridiron season. I can't wait for August! See you at the game!

Hancock & Pass claim tourney titles

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II
Staff Writer

The Hancock Lady Hawks and the Pass Christian Pirates each claimed the respective divisions of the 10th annual Pass Christian Basketball Tournament held November 9th, 10th and 12th at Hancock High School in Kiln.

The tournament was moved to Hancock due to the damage at Pass Christian High School caused by Hurricane Katrina on August 29th.

Hancock head coach Michael Ladner stated, "First and foremost, this is Pass Christian's tournament and we are very honored to help them in any way to host the tournament."

The Hancock Hawks (1-2) lost their first game to Ocean Springs 54-50 after a hard fought game. Drew Malley led Hancock with 18 points followed by Noah Heitzmann with 12 points. Nick Kovacevich led the Greyhounds with 22 points.

The two teams were tied at halftime 26-26.

Ladner added, "We played hard tonight and with effort. If we could get that same effort in practice every day, we will be alright. With the aftermath of the storm, the players have been out of practice for almost 6 weeks. It has been hard on them to work all day in the heat and then practice basketball. It will take some time to get back in basketball shape."

The Hancock Hawks defeated D'Iberville on Thursday night but lost to Pass Christian 58-51. Reggie McIntosh led Pass Christian with 14 points while Malley chipped in 14 points to lead Hancock.

The Pirates (3-0) defeated D'Iberville and Ocean Springs in their first two games before Hancock. Pass Christian head coach Buddy Kennedy commented, "From the beginning, the Hancock officials were very willing to make this tournament happen. I can't say enough to thank them for assisting us in putting this tournament on here in Kiln. This will probably be as close to a home game as we will get for a while. We lost some players due to the storm coming through. If we had been able to keep those players we lost in the area, this year would have been interesting. We have only had seven practices and the players have their own expectations. We believe that we can be competitive."

The Hancock Lady Hawks (3-0) won the girls title with three wins over Pass Christian, D'Iberville and Ocean Springs.

In the game against the Lady Greyhounds,

Hancock was down 38-34 with 2:34 remaining when Shondreka Lee sparked Hancock. Lee sank a three-pointer and then stole the inbound pass. She found Jordyn Meranto under the basket for the go ahead bucket. Hancock defeated Ocean Springs 43-39.

The Lady Hawks defeated D'Iberville 44-40 on Thursday night and the Lady Pirates 55-50 on Saturday night.

Sarah Fricke led Hancock with 12 points against Ocean Springs while Emma Craft chipped in 11 points. In the game against D'Iberville, Jordyn Meranto and Shondreka Lee each scored 10 points to lead the Lady Hawks. Against the Lady Pirates, Randa Lee paced Hancock with 23 points followed by Nicole Wittmann with 18 and Meranto with 15.

Pam Slayton, Hancock's head coach, stated, "This is a young group and every game is going to grow our experience. This was an excellent way to open up. While we don't have the chemistry yet, each night will be about answering questions. This will be a fun group to watch all season."

The Lady Pirates (0-3) dropped their three games in the tournament to D'Iberville 58-37, Ocean Springs 67-38 and 55-50 to Hancock.

Frequently asked questions about debris

Who pays for the debris collection in my area or from my property?

FEMA will reimburse local and state governments for debris removal through the Public Assistance program. Often local and state governments contract private companies for debris removal. If the state and local governments can't provide debris removal assistance in their area, then direct federal assistance is requested and the federal government removes debris by tasking the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE). FEMA will either reimburse local and state governments or task USACE for debris that is identified as a public health or safety threat on public right of ways, and private residential and commercial property.

If the debris is not a public health or safety threat, it is the responsibility of the property owner to remove it. Insured property owners may be able to get assistance through insurance. The Small Business Administration (SBA) may also provide loans to help with debris removal.

Who determines who collects the debris in my area?

If USACE has been tasked to remove debris in your area, it decides what contractors do the work. If your local government is handling debris removal on its own, it will decide who will do the work.

How do I find out when debris will be collected in my area?

Individuals should contact their local jurisdiction for more information on curbside debris removal from private property.

What if debris from the storm fell on my property?

If debris falls on your property it belongs to you and you may bring it to the curb to be picked up. If the debris is identified as a threat to public health and safety by your local government, the government may remove it.

Who will clean out debris in the local harbor and marina?

If the owner is a commercial property owner, he or she is responsible and may receive assistance through insurance. If the marina is government owned, the local government may do it and be reimbursed by FEMA or if the local government has arranged for direct federal assistance through FEMA, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will do it.

Is there any difference in debris removal if USACE was tasked to do it versus a private contractor?

There is no difference if it is tasked before November 26, 2005 deadline of 100 percent reimbursement through FEMA. There may be a cost-share for work tasked after the deadline.

Who removes debris in the ocean that may pose a possible hazard to people and boats?

The Mississippi Department of Marine Resources (MDMR), which administers the State's Derelict Vessel program, removes derelict vessels and other large debris from near shore waters. The U.S. Coast Guard removes such debris from major shipping channels and similar navigational waterways. MDMR and the Coast Guard work in concert to remove dangerous debris which resulted from Hurricane Katrina.

What if my car or boat is now debris?

If the debris is a threat to public health and safety, the local government will remove it, impound it and hand it over to state and local law enforcement where it will be processed as an abandoned vehicle. Authorities will attempt to contact the owner through license and registration and work with them to return it.

What if there is an abandoned building or home in my neighborhood because of the storm?

If the structure is identified as a threat to public health or safety by local government, the government could choose to have the building demolished if there is fear that it is not sound and could fall and cause injury. If the structure is sound, but the inside has been flooded, or is rotting or there are other concerns, the local government can choose to condemn the building and clean it out, shutting off all utilities, boarding it up and securing it.

How long will debris be picked up at the curbside?

There are usually three passes for pick-up. The objective of the first pass is to get all the debris pushed to the side of the road and clear a way for traffic. The second pass is to pick up anything brought to the curbside and remove health and safety hazards from the right of ways such as broken telephone poles, broken signs, hanging trees and other threats. Many communities are currently conducting the second pass. A third pass is made to remove debris that has been brought curbside.

In most of the state, the goal is to complete the third pass by Thanksgiving. For Hancock, Harrison and Jackson counties, where there is much more debris, the goal is to complete the third pass by Christmas.

What happens to the debris after it is picked up?

Debris is taken to a staging and reduction site (which could be run by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, local governments, or private companies) where debris is sorted and reduced. Reduction can be done by mulching, chipping or burning vegetative debris and baling recycled metals. Hazardous materials are separated and disposed of properly. Debris which is recyclable is recycled. Some debris is sent to a landfill. Anything that can be re-used is re-used, such as mulch which can often be sold to companies who want to use it. The goal is to process all debris at staging and reduction sites by March 1st.

How is debris burned?

Burning of debris must be done in accordance with Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality guidelines. Burning takes place a proper distance away from schools, healthcare facilities and populations as required by local government ordinances. The most common method of burning is using incinerators to burn at a very high temperature. Only clean vegetative matter is burned such as tree limbs and other vegetation.

What if human remains are found in debris?

If there is reason to believe there may be human remains on a site, the debris removal process is conducted in a more deliberate and careful manner with more people are involved. Designated spotters work with the teams, walking ahead of the machine loaders, to search for human remains. If human remains are found, all debris removal activity stops and the coroner is called to properly handle the remains. Any investigators who are needed to assist in collecting any personal affects to help identify the remains are also brought in. Once the coroner's on-site work is complete, the coroner gives authorization that the debris removal process may continue. The process is meant to be sensitive and respectful to the deceased.

How are hazardous wastes handled?

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Coast Guard (USCG) are responsible for coordinating and overseeing the proper collection and disposal of hazardous wastes created by the storm. USCG oversees cleanup of hazardous waste in U.S. waterways. If private property owners find hazardous debris on their property, it should be separated from other debris and disposed of at the established neighborhood hazardous waste collection points. EPA, Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality, and county governments are establishing household hazardous waste collection days for neighborhoods along the Mississippi coast. Unknown hazardous debris, such as an unidentifiable drum, should be reported to the local government or the National Response Center (800-424-8802) and EPA will respond by identifying the debris and coordinating removal.

Who do I talk to if I've got questions about debris?

First call your local government. If you need further assistance, FEMA has assigned a Debris Specialist to each county to work with state and local officials. Contact your local or state government and they can get you in touch with a Debris Specialist, who can provide technical assistance on debris issues.

Winter heating safety tips for FEMA temporary housing

The Bay St. Louis Fire Department has some suggestions on staying safe this winter.

1. Ensure smoke detectors and carbon monoxide detectors are operational. Should either detector activate, vacate home immediately and call 911.

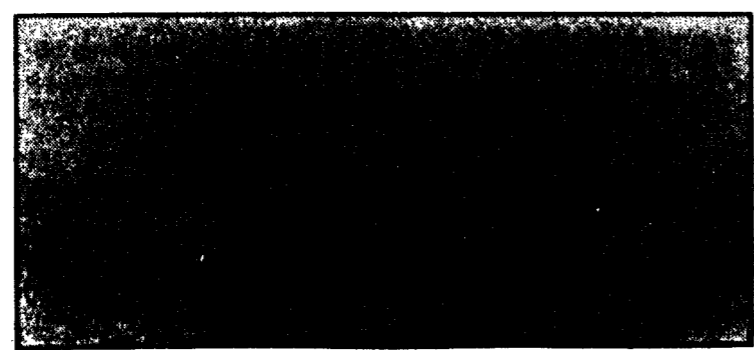

2. For detection or smell of propane, vacate home immediately. Do not activate any switches or place any phone calls from inside, and call 911 from a safe distance.

3. For alternate electric heat, use ceramic heaters only. Heaters should have thermostat, automatic shut off if upset, and heat element guards.

Do not place heater where heat is radiated directly on any part of home or furniture (At least 24" of clearance).

4. Report all emergencies by calling 911.

Southern Miss, Favres raise Breast Cancer Awareness funds

SEA COAST ECHO
The University of Southern Mississippi raised $14,680 for breast cancer awareness and education during the recent Deanna Favre Hope Foundation walk on the Hattiesburg campus.

A breast cancer survivor herself, Deanna Favre, wife of Green Bay Packer quarterback Brett Favre, decided to join Southern Miss in supporting the fighters and survivors of breast cancer. Forrest General Hospital donated $5,000 to sponsor the walk on Oct. 27, and all of the money raised during the walk was donated to the Deanna Favre Hope Foundation for breast cancer awareness education.

The Paint Southern Miss Pink month included a ceremony in honor of those who have survived breast cancer, of those who lost their lives to breast cancer, and of those who are fighting the battle of breast cancer. The ceremony included prayers and speakers encouraging breast cancer awareness and education.

A contest held around the Southern Miss campus for the "Most Pink" building was also held. Faculty, staff and students had a chance to show support to those participating in the walk by decorating buildings and balconies with pink. The "Southern Survivors" judged the pink contest and awarded the College of Health first place. Roberts Hall won second place, and Kappa Alpha Theta won first place for the balconies.

The largest turnout was at the Deanna Favre Hope walk, with 624 walkers showing their support for the cause. The month and walk would not have been such a success if it were not for Mary Beth Banksor Walker, assistant director of Student Activities and the Paint Southern Miss Pink committee. "The walk was a fantastic success," Walker said. "We had more men and women participate than I ever could have imagined."
